When officials at the Potomac railroad yards this afternoon opened a box car loaded with tomatoes from South Carolina, bound for New York, they were greatly astonished to find a colored man walk out. He gave his name as James Doyle, 24 years old, and said he helped to load the car in Mezzetta, S. C., and before he realized it was a prisoner, that being Thursday afternoon.

Doyle had the cargo of tomatoes and a bucket of water to live on. He says he knocked on the car door at every station in order to attract attention, but all in vain. He further says he was knocking on the car door at the Potomac yards, which, however, failed to attract attention.

Doyle was taken to police station and given a meal which he ate ravenously. Doyle says he may stay here until he is released, but he is not sure.

VENIZELOS IN THE FIELD.

This photograph shows Eleutherios Venizelos, the famous Greek demagogue, talking to an army officer on the Saloniki front. M. Venizelos has just returned to Athens to take control voted him by the Greek people at the election, the mandates of which were arbitrarily disregarded by King Constantine, who recently abdicated.

Fifteen Children Victims Of Kaiser's Aerial Raid

"The Germans claim to have bombed the fort of London. That is the only explanation they have to give, and there are ten little children who have suffered from this bombing of a fort. How little children could have been in a fort passes understanding."

This scandalous declaration was made by the popular coroner, Wynne Baxendale, in opening the inquests on the fifteen little children who perished by a bomb falling on an East End school, says the London Chronicle. The proceedings were of a very pathetic character, and many were moved to tears. The courthouse was crowded with the relatives of the dead little ones, dressed in deep mourning, and several of the leading men in the borough were present.

"I shall not waste epithets upon the inhumanity of the Germans," said the mayor, in tones approaching anger, "any more than to say that these boys and girls have died as truly for their country and for everything worth dying for, as any of our men at the front or on the high seas."

The mayor added that there would be a public funeral of the victims next Wednesday from the parish church at 2 o'clock, when the Suffragan bishop would officiate. All the children would be interred in one grave, so that they should not be separated even in death. Later a memorial will be placed above them.

"I hope, added the mayor, "that this ghastly inhuman treatment will steel our hearts and confirm our resolution to put an end to this sort of thing for all time."

Mr. W. H. Crook, M. P., who was on the scene at the time of the raid, said that the teachers of the school worked heroically. "They were brave beyond description; no heavier display of heroism could have been greater than the bravery they displayed. These are all neighbors and friends of mine; I can say no more."

Two More Missing.
Dr. S. O. O'Brien said he was called to the school, and found a large crater where a bomb had dropped. The children were covered with debris that they could not be seen. Mrs. Middleton, a teacher, who was too ill to attend, had worked heroically, although injured. She pointed out places where he was likely to find children. Some of the debris was so heavy that the assistance of several men was required before it was properly cleared. Some of the children extricated were alive, and were taken to hospital, where they recovered.

The coroner: I am told that remains are still being discovered. A pair of boots has been found, and although the body of the child wearing them cannot be found, there must still be some bodies somewhere.

The doctor: Unless they were blown to pieces by the bombs, which is not unlikely. Some of the children were terribly mutilated.

Miss M. Watkins, a teacher in the infants' department, said they had not the slightest warning, and knew nothing until they heard the explosion. There was a terrible noise, semi-darkness, and a fearful smell. She was covered with plaster and cement.

The coroner: You thought you were being buried alive? Witness: Yes, and suffocated, too.

"I called to the children," continued Miss Watkins, "and made a way to a glimmer of light I could see in the corridor. I got all my children out without injury, except for a few scratches. I then went back and helped to get other children free. I carried out four small children. Three boys fell through the ceiling from the boys' school into the infants' department below."

Stuck to Their Classmates.
Miss Ely, head mistress of the infants' department, a quiet spoken, middle-aged lady, dressed in black, related that when the bomb fell she was standing in the corridor on a way to the ground floor. She at once went to where the sound came from, and found children marching out covered with plaster and cement. She helped to get some out of the classroom, and then went for assistance. She attempted to account for everybody in the school, but two children, about 8 years of age, had not been discovered. There were in all 44 children in the room.

NEW RAILWAY PACT MAY ALTER FINDING

Senate Strike Investigating Committee Told of Potomac Contract.

Related announcement that the Washington Railway and Electric Company has made a new working contract with the Potomac Electric Power Company, which has been made on the basis of the findings of the Senate strike investigating committee.

The fiscal affairs of the company were delved into at some length by the Senate Committee, for the purpose of determining whether the company could afford to pay the higher wages sought by the striking conductors and motormen. It has developed, at the hearings before the Public Utilities Commission, that the Washington Railway and Electric had made the new contract since May 2, when the valuation findings on the Potomac Company were handed down by the commission. Its terms grant greater concessions than the original contract, which the commission believed still in existence.

The commission had received no notice of the new agreement and believed that the only agreement in existence was the original agreement of June, 1906, which had been verbally modified by the company, but which modifications had not previously been put in written form.

"What did you want to put it in definite form for, if you had been waiting, upon it for ten or eleven years," asked Corporation Counsel Syme?

"I thought it was a good idea," replied Mr. Ham, vice president of the W. R. & E. "I thought it was a good idea."

The commission denied the petition of the W. R. & E. to be admitted as a party to the rate proceedings of the Potomac Company.

Financial statistics offered at the Senate strike hearings were based upon Public Utilities Commission records and are thus not up to date as disclosed by these developments. None of the members of the strike committee cared to comment on the matter last night.

PROVIDES PLEASURE FOR FIGHTING MEN

National League for Woman's Service Starts Recreation Centers.

(By International News Service.)
New York, July 5.—"The United States is your admission ticket," is a slogan that will soon be greeting soldiers and sailors wherever they are concentrated. This reversal of the old prejudice that the United States is in uniform from decent amusement places is being fostered by the National League for Woman's Service, the branches of which throughout the country will soon be providing recreation centers for the boys in khaki and blue.

The social club for sailors and soldiers opened by the league in New York has proved so successful that plans are going forward under the direction of the league's social and welfare department to establish similar clubs elsewhere. The movement is to be modeled on the English canteens, the operation of which has been studied by experts for adaptation to the needs of our own men. The plan has the enthusiastic approval of the military authorities, as well as of the Y. M. C. A. and other men's welfare organizations. In fact, the branches of the league are instructed by national headquarters to make New York to consult local military authorities and the Y. M. C. A. before opening a club.

The canteens in New York have met with immediate favor among the men in uniforms. Here the soldiers, sailors or marines may meet and be entertained, or spend a quiet hour in the library or in the game room, without the bother of waiting for a table in a restaurant, or the expense of a uniform being the ticket that entitles them to everything on the card free, from cigarettes to dancing. The league has enlisted known entertainers, musicians and singers, while piano dealers, cigarette and tobacco manufacturers, candy companies and stationers have stocked up the canteens with everything the men need.

Members of the league, their daughters and other relations, among them many maids and matrons of social prominence, attend the club as hostesses and dancing partners. Mrs. Herbert C. Halcomb, of the league's social and welfare department, originated the movement, and takes personal charge of the entertainment, crediting it to the club's maintenance at a place of healthy amusement and not as a "highbrow" meeting for the men's moral uplift.

CAPE PATROL FLEET LOOKS FOR U-BOATS

Naval Opinion Is Divided on Presence of German Submarines.

The navy has received no confirmation of the reports of a submarine operating off the Virginia capes. No chances are being taken, however, and a large patrol fleet is closely covering all that part of the Atlantic.

Naval opinion is divided as to the possibility of submarine's presence. One officer said yesterday that there was little doubt of the fact that one had been sighted. Another officer, of equal authority, these matters, said that he believed the presence of a U-boat impossible.

At the time of the attack upon the destroyer Jones, off the capes some time ago, the fleet commander concluded that the submarine was of the cargo-carrying type and that she was here on a mine laying mission. Whether or not mines were laid and how many, the fleet commander has never been made public.

The submarine, which attacked the Jones, had a very lucky escape. She was not hit by the fleet's searchlight, and she was not seen by the fleet's searchlight. She was seen by the fleet's searchlight, and she was not seen by the fleet's searchlight.

Before connection could be made with another and larger dynamo the torpedo had been fired and the submarine submerged. Had the searchlight burned for just the half minute necessary to train the Jones's guns, the submarine would have been an easy target, as she was only a few hundred feet away, and running on the surface.

In view of this incident the greatest precautions are now being observed.

TO OPEN ANNAPOLIS BIDS.

An expenditure of nearly $2,500,000, by which the facilities of the Naval Academy at Annapolis, Md., will be greatly increased, will be involved in the opening of sealed proposals Monday by the Bureau of Yards and Docks of the Navy Department for extensions to Bancroft and Sherwood Hall.

REGISTRY CLERK LOSES JOB.

Albany, July 6.—Lack of patriotism, or rather an attempt to capitalize it, has proved expensive and humiliating for an upstate city clerk. The city clerk involved was the only one in the State who claimed the Federal compensation for work in connection with the registration June 5.

The assistant general office was advised today that the man in question has been reduced from his position as city clerk to janitor of the city hall.

Had Plotted, Also, to Blow Up the Panama Canal and Bridge.

WILSON TAKES HAND TO FIX STEEL PRICE

Government, Weary of Waiting, Moves to Adjust Conditions.

The price of steel will be fixed by the Government within three weeks, according to officials connected with the Shipping Board, the Federal Trade Commission and the Council of National Defense. It is declared that the Government has grown weary of waiting for the steel men to reach an agreement, and has determined finally to take matters in its own hands.

The Federal Trade Commission now is at work on an investigation of steel production costs, the result of which it will report to the President. Following this, it is stated, a steel price will be fixed.

The Department of Justice is in possession of a vast amount of evidence regarding the activities of the steel trust, and the Government will not hesitate to use this in bringing about a quick settlement on a steel price.

A government official declares that it is especially important that the steel price controversy be brought abruptly to an end, and placed on a basis of at least partial Government control, inasmuch as the steel industry is in a chaotic condition. Manufacturing establishments dependent on the steel mills for materials are operating only 25 to 30 per cent of normal. This is delaying the output of the entire country and the delay affects munitions of war as well as other products vital in the carrying on of war preparations.

Recently a compromise on a price of $39 a ton for steel was tentatively reached between the United States Steel Corporation, which now is producing nearly half of the output, and the Government. Chairman Denman of the Shipping Board strongly objected to this price, claiming that it was the result of the Government's failure to act in the time of the steel strike of 1916, and that the Government should now act to prevent a similar situation.

Wild Boars in England.

Wild boars once abundant among the primeval forests of the British Islands, and furnished a favorite sport in the days before the fox and pheasant reigned supreme. In the time of the Plantagenets they were plentiful in the woodlands around London. James I. hunted them in 1617 near Windsor, and down in 1688 wild swine still had their haunts in the more secluded parts of England. The presence of these animals in the woods and marshes that surrounded Oxford during the Middle Ages seems proved by the famous boar's head procession at Queen's College, which commemorates every Christmas the fabled feat of a scholar of that foundation who coolly choked a chattering wild boar with a volume of Aristotle's philosophy.
